Managing a Multigenerational Workforce

Managing a Multigenerational Workforce

Thursday, 3rd June 2021 | Attend in London or Online

With five generations currently active in the workforce, it is exceedingly common to have several generations working together on teams and within organisations.

Differing motivations, value systems, skillsets, experiences, and attitudes to work can present considerable challenges. However, multigenerational teams and workforces also present significant opportunities to share knowledge and capitalise on multiple strengths and insights.

Furthermore, with the ageing population increasing and remaining in work, effective age management is key to future-proofing your business and avoiding a critical skills gap.

Join us for 'Managing a Multigenerational Workforce', to receive expert guidance on fostering cross-generational cooperation and supporting employees at all stages of their lives and careers. You will come away with crucial, actionable insight for harnessing the power of multiple ages, skillsets and experiences.

Delegates will have the option of attending this event in-person in London or online. Any social-distancing requirements necessary at the time will be in place, with the safety of delegates and speakers at the heart of the day.

On-demand video recordings of each session will also be made available to delegates following the event.
